Case Study

Southmead Hospital

Built by main contractor Carillion, the ground-breaking super hospital showcases healthcare, construction and technological innovations.

In the facility's critical care units (CCU), Optima provided a bespoke partitioning system incorporating over 2,395m² of glazed wall panels which enables staff to see into each unit without the need to enter the room and disturb the patient.

The company's extensive package of work included a wide and expansive range of glass partitions, sliding door sets, hinged door sets and pivoting door sets – with Optima proving its ability to meet the most challenging specifications by designing, engineering and installing a number of bespoke solutions.

In total, Optima supplied 60 x sliding door sets, 67 x hinged door sets and 8 x pivoting door sets which were double glazed using 6mm glass to both sides.

All doors were supplied as double sets with leaf sizes ranging from 2,555mm x 662mm to the largest panels of 2,647mm x 953mm.

Officially opened in May 2014, Southmead Hospital represents the future of healthcare design and construction in the UK.

With careful consideration to every element of its interior and exterior – including over 500 glazed partitioning screens and 135 glazed door sets from Optima – the development sets the standard for others to follow.
